

Lin is a seasoned healthcare leader with more than 10 years of clinical operations management experience, to include a strong background in applying quality improvement, care planning and design, data integration, patient safety and risk management, and a proven ability to lead interdisciplinary teams and leverage the latest technology and management tools to achieve the Triple Aim.

She is currently the Director of the OU College of Medicine Clinical Skills Education and Testing Center (CSETC) and a core faculty member core member of the Health Sciences Center Interprofessional Education and Practice Collaborative. She was a recipient of The Robert Wood Johnson Foundation fellowship to the Institute for Healthcare Improvement (IHI) Leadership Academy in Cambridge, Massachusetts which led to the founding of the IHI Open School Chapter in Oklahoma City.