

Syeachia Dennis, M.D., assistant professor of Family Medicine, completed her family medicine residency at the West Suburban Family Medicine program in Oak Park, Illinois. Prior to joining the OU School of Community Medicine, Dr. Dennis worked for Morton Comprehensive Health Services, where she served on the National Health Service Corp. Dr. Dennis supervises OU family medicine residents as part of the Teaching Health Center grant given to Morton and on the inpatient obstetric and medicine services. She is currently a part-time MPH student at Johns Hopkin Bloomberg School of Public Health. Her interests are in health care for vulnerable populations, women's and adolescent health, and quality improvement programs.